1. Welcome

These are the terms and conditions for using the Starling app, which you can use to make payments and manage your account. For example, you can set up standing orders, manage Direct Debits, and update your personal details instantly.

The Starling app is also the main way in which we'll communicate with you and the quickest way you can get in touch with us.

When we say 'Starling', 'we', 'our', or 'us' in these terms, we mean Starling Bank Limited. When we say 'you' or 'your', we mean the person whose name the account is under.

Please make sure you read these terms carefully – you'll need to accept them before you can use the Starling app.

These terms apply across all of our personal accounts. You should read this document alongside the terms and conditions and account schedule for your account. If these terms say something different to the terms and conditions and account schedule for your account:

- the terms and conditions and account schedule will apply for all matters relating to your account, including account deposits, payments and withdrawals
- these terms will apply for matters relating to the use of the Starling app

We'll let you know if we update or change these terms. We might do this at any time to reflect changes to the law, or to give you information about any new features. By continuing to use the Starling app, you accept these changes.

If you don't accept these terms, please get in touch. We'll then close your account or accounts, as you won't be able to carry out most – or all – of the functions you need for your account.

2. Getting started

Is your device compatible with the Starling app?

To use the Starling app, you'll need to have a compatible Apple or Android device. You should check you've installed the latest operating system on your device.

For various functionality and security reasons, we might not allow older iOS and Android operating systems to use our app. For more details on which iOS and Android versions the app can run on, please visit our website: help.starlingbank.com/business/topics/setting-up-an-account/what-devices-can-i-use-the-starling-bank-app-on

We aren't responsible for any loss or damage you face if your device is infected by a virus or corrupt file and this impacts your use of the app in any way. For more information on what we're responsible for, please see the 'Our legal responsibility' section under 'Rights and responsibilities' below.

The app uses push notifications to give you certain information, notices and messages from us. You shouldn't turn these push notifications off, or you could miss important messages about your account.

Keeping the Starling app up to date

You must upgrade the Starling app when a new version is available. You should check that you have the latest software updates installed on your device. If you don't, certain features of the app might not work, or you might not be able to use it at all.

We won't be responsible if you can't use the app because you didn't update it or you didn't update your device's operating system.

When we'll make updates

We'll make updates to the Starling app from time to time to improve functionality, security and customer experience. If this will affect your access or we need to temporarily take the app down to make an update, we'll let you know before we do this.

If we need to carry out any unplanned maintenance on the app (for example, to fix an issue), we'll let you know as soon as we can.

Keeping your details safe

When you download the Starling app, you'll need to choose certain security details that you'll use to log in to the app, such as a password or passcode. You should ensure these details are unique and that you don't use the same security details you use on other websites and apps. It's your responsibility to keep this information safe and private.

If you have a joint account, both you and the other account holder can download the app. Please make sure you don't share your password or passcode with anyone else, including the person you hold the account with.

If you think someone else has access to your Starling app or your security details, please let us know straight away. Remember, we'll never ask for your passcode, password, or other security details. Never share your security details with anyone, even if they say they work for us.

3. How your Starling app works

Features and functions

From time to time, we may release new features and functionality in the app.

We'll make these new features and functionality available for you to use subject to your acceptance of these terms. For more information on the app's latest features, visit our website at starlingbank.com/features

If you have an Under 16s Space

Starling Under 16s allows a child to have limited access to the Starling app. The child won't be able to make payments through the Starling app but they will be able to view their balance and transactions.

When you can limit the child's access to the Starling app

If you're the parent or legal guardian of a child using Under 16s, you can choose whether to add additional limits to the child's access to and use of the Starling app.

You can also ask us to remove your child's access to the Starling app at any time. This won't affect their Under 16s Space or Under 16s card, and they'll still be able to use these.

When we may limit the child's access to the Starling app

We can limit the child's access to the Starling app at any time without letting you or the child know in advance. We'll also do this straight away if the child's Under 16s Space is closed.

Your responsibilities

You must make sure your child follows the guidelines we've set for using the Starling app in these terms. If they don't, you may be responsible for any losses (such as money) that we may incur.

Things you mustn't do

Under these terms, you must not do, or help anyone else to do, any of these things:

- Install the Starling app on someone else's device and access your account through it.
- Allow anyone else to register their biometrics on your device. Biometrics include things like fingerprint or face scans – these are commonly used as security measures.
- Share your password, passcode, or security details with anyone else.
- Use the Starling app for anything illegal.
- Use the Starling app in a way that breaks these terms you have with us.
- Hack into or access the Starling app to collect any data or collect any information from our systems.
- Tamper with the Starling app, adapt it, interfere with it, or access the app in a way that could damage it or stop it from working, or affect our systems or other users.
- Upload any content that's considered violent, defamatory, threatening, discriminatory, or with the potential to encourage racial hate, harmful or illegal acts.
- Upload any content that's considered obscene, pornographic, or that breaches someone's confidence or privacy.
- Try to bypass the app security controls and permissions we've set.

Under these terms, you're not allowed to change how the Starling app works, copy it, or convert it into a different form – for example, for a computer to understand or process. You also can't help anyone else to do any of these things. This includes reverse-engineering the app, which can involve:

- Taking the machine code of the app and recreating the original source code to understand how it works.
- Translating the machine code of the app into a format that someone can read.

If you do any of the above, we may hold you responsible for any loss or harm we suffer as a result.

What happens when your account is closed

Deleting the Starling app will not close your account or end your agreement with us. Please make sure you read the Personal Account General Terms and your account schedule for rules around closing your account.

If you or we close your account, don't delete your Starling app until all accounts with us have been closed and your money has been returned.

If you owe us money, don't delete the app until you've paid us back.

Once all your accounts with us are closed, you should save any important account information (such as any statements or other important documents). After this, you must delete the app from all your devices. These terms will terminate once you delete the app.

4. Rights and responsibilities

Our legal responsibility

If we don't keep to these terms and conditions, we'll be responsible for any losses (such as money) you suffer as a result. We won't be responsible for anything outside of our control, or anything we couldn't have predicted beforehand.

The Starling app is made available for customers on an 'as is' basis. This means that when we give you access to the app, this is done in whatever condition the app currently exists in. We won't guarantee that there will never be any faults or issues with the app or that it'll always be available to you to use.

Your right to use the Starling app

We give you a non-transferable, royalty-free right to use the Starling app and its software to open and manage your account. This will apply to any app updates that we release unless we issue a new licence at the time of the update.

Your right to use the Starling app starts when you install it. It will end when you close your accounts with us and delete the app.

We may end your rights to use the Starling app at any time by contacting you if we believe you have broken these terms. If what you've done can be put right, we'll give you a reasonable opportunity to do so. If what you've done can't be put right or you fail to do so, we'll end your rights to use the app, and you must stop using it and delete it from your device.

Intellectual property rights

'Intellectual property' in these terms means things we've (or someone on our behalf has) thought of or invented. When we say our 'intellectual property rights,' we refer to the rights that we have to own and use those inventions or creations.

We own all intellectual property rights in our brand name, our software, the Starling app and online banking. We also 'licence' our intellectual property to people other than you, which means while we own these rights, we sometimes give others permission to use our intellectual property.

Other than the licence to use the app as set out in these terms, you won't be given any rights related to our intellectual property.

Transferring rights

You can't transfer your rights under these terms unless we've agreed to it. We can transfer our rights to another business or person, but this won't change the nature of these app terms or the terms of your account. We can also enforce our rights at any time while you have an account with us.

Using the Starling app outside of the UK

If you want to use the Starling app outside the UK, you are responsible for making sure it is lawful to do so in that country. You're responsible for complying with those local laws. We aren't responsible for any loss you suffer if you break those local laws.

Your information and privacy

We use device analytics to make the Starling app work efficiently, safely and securely. This helps us to protect against fraud, comply with financial crime laws, and manage and identify any security or fraud risks that might arise.

Our privacy notice has information about how we collect, use, share, and store your personal information. It also explains when we will use your information and who we can share it with. To understand how we do this and what your rights are, please read the full privacy notice. This is available in the Starling app and on our website at starlingbank.com/legal/privacy-notice

Open-source software and external websites

The Starling app uses open-source software and licences. Details of these are available in the app. The app may also contain links to third-party websites not connected to Starling. We're not responsible for the information these websites provide or how they use your information.
